WHEELING, SEPTEMBER 21, 1893.

Consistency With a Vengeauce. "We must have protection for our sugar," shout the Democratic organs of Louisiana. "We must have protection for our coal," shout the Democrats of West Virginia. "We must have protection for our manufactures," shout the Democrats of New England. And so the shout goes up all along the line.

What has become of the charge that protection is a robbery and that it taxes the many to enrich the few? Isn't a tariff for protection as unconstitutional to-day as it was when these same editors and party leaders were dealing the doctrine out to the people a year ago? We have it on the authority of two such distinguished Democratic leaders as Governor MacCorkle and ex-Senator Henry G. Davis that a repeal of the duty on coal would ruin the industry in West Virginia. And yet this duty, which is levied, not for revenue only, but for protection, according to Democratic arguments is a fraud, a robbery and unconstitutional. A year ago Governor MacCorkle was making a tour of this state appealing to the people to vote against this unconstitutional robbery. Tuesday he appeared before the ways and means committee eloquently pleading that the "robber tariff" as to coal be not disturbed; that "the industry could not exist without the small aid it now gets (under the McKinley bill) from the duty on coal." Note that the governor and Senator

Davis do not demand this duty because the government needs the revenue, but solely because the industry needs protection. But the ways and means committee is pledged to carry out the pledges made in the Democratic platform and the gentlemen's prediction that West Virginia's greatest industry will be ruined thereby may be verified. The McKinley bill which gives this protection has been denounced as an iniquity and it must go. If the coal tariff is retained then every clause in the bill must be retained, for every clause was drafted for the same purpose-that of protection. If the duty on wool is an iniquity, a robbery, then is also the tariff on coal a robbery. Why demand a repeal of the tax on the poor man's coat, his dinner pail, the table he eats from, and in the same breath demand that he be taxed for the fire that warms him and that cooks his meals? What consistency is there in the position of Governor MacCorkle, whose vigorous denunciations of the "robber coal and iron barons" during the last campaign are still fresh in the public mind?

Every day furnishes frosh evidence before the ways and means committee that the election of the Democratic party to power last November was the consummation of a huge confidence game in which the Democratic leaders acted as bunco-steerers. Every day it developes that they deceived the people by a false cry, the only purpose of which was to get in power.

ONLY a little more than a month of the big show remains. Those who miss going will regret it. All who can afford should go.

The Tariff and Wages.

Democratic organs and leaders frequently declare that wages are not affeeted by the tariff-that protection in no way benefits the wage earner. This fallacy has been repeatedly laid out by the testimony of the workingmen themselves. In all the tariff hearings before the ways and means committee the testimony has been that a reduction of the tariff would necessarily affect wages since it would be necessary for the American manufacturers to reduce the price of labor in order to compete with the products of cheap foreign labor.

In his argument before the committee on Tuesday a distinguished West Virginia Democrat, and a leader of that party both in the state and the nation. Hon. Henry G. Davis, declared that "96 per cent of the value of coal is labor. and if coal is placed on the free list laborers must stand a decrease in wages, and railroad companies must get less for transportation."

Senator Davis knows whereof he speaks. No man is more thoroughly posted on the subject, and no man is more competent to judge of the effect of the tariff on wages. His testimony agrees with that of the representatives of all other branches of industry who have spoken. It is the testimony of are gradually having their eyes opened to a realization of the sort of a hole they voted themselves into when they helped elect a Congress and President pledged to wipe out every vestage of protection on the ground that protection is a robbery and unconstitutional.

Your uncle Thomas B. Reed is having his inning now, and he isn't missing his opportunity. The Democratic side of the house winces under his steady fire.

A Dizzy Story.

Some West Virginia Democrat who, for obvious reasons, has asked that his name be withheld, has been imposing on the Chicago Herald. In its issue of Tuesday the Herald prints a column interview with this mysterious person in which he purports to give some inside history of the famous Goff-Fleming gubernatorial contest in this state. The "interviewed" either presumes greatly on the ignorance of the interviewer, or else he makes a lamentable display of ignorance on his own part, when, in telling a dizzy story of how Governor MacCorkle and a woman saved the contest from being decided in General Goff's favor, he refers to Governor MacCorkle as a man who developed great powers of leadership and "might have gone to the United States senate when Mr. Kenna died if he had wanted to." Those who remember the peculiar situation at Charleston at the time of Mr. Kenna's death will appreciate this remarkable break of the "prominent Democrat."

In relating the history of the gubernatorial contest the "prominent Democrat" shows his unfamiliarity with the subject when he says: "Goff claimed the election, but the face of the returns gave Fleming 500 plurality. Goff contested the count and carried the matter before the legislature." Nothing could be farther from the truth. The fact is Goff was elected on the face of the returns, but was denied his prima facie title to the seat. It was Fleming, the Democratic candidate, who brought the contest and a partisan legislature seated him against the expressed will of the people at the polls. This much, by way of correcting the Herald interview.

The story that Governor MacCorklo went to Philadelphia, and through the wife of a lawyer who controlled the vote of a certain Democratic state senator who was about to vote with the Republicans, brought an influence to bear which prevented the senator from carrying out his intention, is equally dizzy. The over-zealous friend of Governor MacCorkle, in his attempt to give the governor all the credit (?) for the gubernatorial steal, has told a Munchausen tale which will amuse rather than instruct West Virginians.

ONE Walter Gresham has been elected to Congress from Texas. He is not a kinsman of the secretary of state and says he would not recognize him if he was. He has no use for renegade Re-

The Exchange Bank Resumes,

The reopening of the Exchange Bank yesterday is cause for general satisfaction in the business circles of Wheeling. The fact that the institution resumes with an increased capital stock and that the results of the first day's business show that the depositors and patrons have implicit confidence in the management, is a matter in itself upon which the officers and directors deserve to be congratulated.

The happy outcome of the Exchange Bank matter emphasizes the truth of the claim that has always been made for Wheeling's financial institutions, that they are firmly founded, conservatively and safely managed and are able to withstand just such strains as that through which the country has been passing.

THE war on the lords in England is growing more serious, and people are feeling may increase so that the throne itself will be included.

Gov. MacCorkle on the Tariff.

On Tuesday, after Governor MacCorkle had finished his eloquent plea before the ways and means committee for a retention of the protective duty on coal, he was briefly cross-examined as follows by Mr. Tarsney:

"When were you elected governor of West Vir-ginla?"

ginia"
"Last November."
"The platform upon which you were elected was for a reduction of duties, was it not?"
"Yes, sir."
"Then why are you advocating protection?"
"I do not believe in a tariff which gives four or five times as high protection to one industry as mother. We are great producers of coal, and I think we ought to be protected."

It is unfortunate that Mr. Tarsney did not have at hand a copy of Mr. Mac-Corkle's campaign speech, in which he denounced the "coal and iron barons." and labored hard in the attempt to prove that the tariff is an unjust tax paid by the consumer, and that protection is a fraud and a robbery of the masses to enrich the few. It would have afforded us at home a great deal of satisfaction to have our governor explain to the ways and means committee what has brought about his change of heart and why it is that if a tariff for protection was an unconstitutional robbery in 1892 it isn't so in 1893.

for the benefit of the few and that for the benefit of the few and that is what the tariff on coal amounts to, if the claims of the coal men are true—that it enables them to get more for their coal than they would otherwise get. If it is right to protect the Kanawha coal operators it is right to protect Mr. Carnegie and all the iron and steel men and other producers and to make the consumers are the increase. If it is wrong to proproducers and to make the consumers pay the increase. If it is wrong to protect the iron and steel industry, it is wrong to protect the coal operators and the Democratic party is firmly set against it. The sentiments of the Democracy of West Virginia were not expressed by the directly interested parties who appeared before the ways and means committee yesterday.

The Amusing Spectacle.

The spectacle presented to-day of begging the ways and means committee not to do what they had instructed Congress to do, by their votes, was both amusing and disgusting. A Pennsylvania operator who was in the room said: "Yes, there they come. After yelling free trade for 384 days in the recent they got days on their stomachs. year they get down on their stomachs and crawl before the ways and means committee, begging ro be protected from the result of their own dod-rotted

Were it not that so many hundreds of thousands of American citizens are dependent on the coal industries, the Republicans feel that they would be justified in giving these fool Democrats in Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland an object lesson in tariff reform. The duty will remain on coal, it is more than probable, as the President is said to be interested in some Virginia mines, and and in the six counties embraced in Chairman Wilson's own district, in West Virginia, there are 3,000 or 4,000 West Virginia, there are 3,000 or 4,000 coal miners, supporting a population of 20,000, who would be the first to teel the 20,000, who would be the first to feet the removal of the tariff.

Gov. MacCorkle, of West Virginia, was the best witness from a Republican standpoint that appeared. He made a grandlloquent address in which he warned the Democrats of the committee that if they tampered with the duty on coal, his state would leave the Democratio ranks. "It acted as a buffer between the porth and the south during tween the north and the south during the war," he said, "and will act as a buffer between the two political parties if you take the duty off her coal."

The Most Terrible Mistake Possible to Hake.

And the Frightful Results Which Followed.

All Should be Careful to Avoid This Great Danger.

The world is careless. And it is just this carelessness which consti-

From little-things grow great things—a small beginning often results in an awful and disastrous ending.

A gentleman well known by us has just passed through an experience which perfectly demon-strates this. He began to have certain feelings which he could not explain. He grew languid and tired, felt weak, in fact, after any kind of exertion. He had headache, dizziness and his stomach and bowels troubled him. There was a sodiment in his water. After a while he had numb spells, trembling feeling in his legs, arms and body. Then there came prickling sensations in his fingers and toes.
Suddenly he had a shock of paralysis.

For the simple reason that he had for months neglected, through ignorance of their meaning and danger, the gradually growing symptoms of this awful disease
